THE POOR LITTLE PRINCE

Part Three

The wicked people who broke into the castle soon made the king and queen prisoners and carried them off to a lonely castle on an island, so that they could not escape. They arrested the prince minister, too, and off to the island he was sent as well. You may say they made a long search for little Prince Philip, for they wanted to carry him off to the island, too, but, of course, little Prince Philip was not to be found.

While the search for him was going on the little prince was being carried on the back of the faithful Tingles to Fairyland.

Tingles, as soon as he was well away from the castle walls, had taken a long jump and landed high above the clouds onto a beautiful road all paved with green velvet and lined on each side with pretty flowers. Prince Philip cried out in delight at the beauty around him.

"What road is this?" he asked Tingles.

"It is the road to Fairyland," the magic dog answered. "We will soon be there now."

Now you will remember that it was the prince minister who had given Tingles to the little prince, so you will have guessed that he was a friend of the fairies. So great a friend was he that the whole of Fairyland was sent into sorrow when they heard that he was a prisoner on the island.

When Tingles and the little prince arrived at the gates of Fairyland, the queen of the fairies was there to meet them.

"Why didn't you bring the prince minister with you?" she asked angrily.

"I have not carried out your duty," he answered.

"I could only carry the little prince," he answered.

The queen of the fairies' heart softened as she saw the handsome little prince sitting on the back of his beloved dog.

"It's too bad the prince minister can't be saved," she answered, "but now that he is a prisoner of his own people, the fairies have no power to help him. He can only be saved by one of royal blood, his own people."

"I am of royal blood and I am of his own people," little Prince Philip spoke up. "What can I do to save the prince minister?"

The queen of the fairies was delighted with the little prince's willingness to help, and told him in no words as possible of the misfortune that had befallen his people and the prince minister.

"I will go back to the world and save them," the little prince declared stoutly.

"And I will go with you," Tingles the faithful magic dog spoke up.

So it was that Tingles and little Prince Philip started back to the world once more.

(To be continued.)

Mackenzie Equals
Course Record In Golf At Lethbridge

In the golf competition pulled off last week-end at Lethbridge, although Mackenzie lost out as a whole, J. G. Mackenzie made a showing that has won the hearts of Macleod's golf enthusiasts.

With the number of golf enthusiasts there are in Lethbridge it is unfortunate that many did not avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing J. G. Mackenzie, the senior pro from Macleod, in action. It would have been a treat for the ordinary golf fan to see the match between Mackenzie and the Lethbridge crack, Davey Hume.

Mackenzie equalled the course record of 35 up by Harry Menzies, a five weeks ago, and on his second round he had a 35. Hume was right on his gun and made the big follow up shot. At the very last, losing one down, missing a putt on the 18th for an all square tie. The scores of the big game are as follows:

Mackenzie (out) 45.4, 36.3, 44.3—35
Hume (out) ..... 54.3, 55.4, 53.3—38
Mackenzie (in) ..... 45.4, 57.4, 53.4—39
Hume (in) ..... 55.3, 55.3, 55.5—39

Mackenzie, 74 for 18; Hume, 77; Hoge, 80; Par is 68. Hume's last two, 8 five and 3 three, and the 18 hole, Hume had 9 fives, 3 threes, 2 fours and 1 six.

To give an idea of what J. G. Mackenzie can pull, look at his three for the 46-yard 4th hole. Again on the 2nd he drove a ball estimated at 296 yards, level with the second point just. Mackenzie played the 4th hole in 4 and 3. The fifth hole was his hoodoo, having a 6 and a 7.

There was another heavy hitter on Mackenzie's team in Dr. Kennedy, but he was trimmed in the singles. Kennedy drove into the corner of the fence with his tee shot on the first hole out of bounds unfortunately for 270 yards.

The contestants were the combined teams of Macleod and Pincher Creek, the Pincher Creek visitors being Messrs. Jackson, Graham and Jackson, and contestants from Macleod were Mackenzie, Kennedy, McGladdery, Starck, Martin, Chisholm, Johnson, Peterson and Fawcett.

Lethbridge was 8 out of 7 in the two-ball foursomes and 9 out of 14 in the singles.

Mackenzie-Kennedy vs. Hume-McGill, 2-1.
Graham-Starck vs. Menzies-Kirkham, lost.

McGladdery-Gregory vs. McDowell-Williams, lost.
Martin-Smith vs. Reid-Muir, lost.

Johnson-Peterson vs. Hicks-Dingling, lost.
Chisholm-Fawcett vs. McCready-Aclon, won.

Singles
Mackenzie vs. Hume, won.
Kennedy vs. McKillop, lost.

Menzies vs. N. T. Macleod, lost.
McGladdery vs. McDowell, won.
Starck vs. Menzies, lost.

Megginson vs. Muir, lost.
Jackson vs. Craig, lost.
Gregory vs. Williams, lost.

Tablett vs. Kirkham, won.
Chisholm vs. B. M. McLeod, lost.
Johnson vs. Dingling, lost.

Peterson vs. Hicks, lost.
Smith vs. Reid, lost.
Fawcett vs. Barnaby, won.

Mr. Graham is the Indian agent at Brocket and Starck is a brother-in-law of J. G. Mackenzie and an arrival in the west. He is a law firm, but had trouble with his first shot on the short hole.

The Lethbridge Herald says: "When Mackenzie comes again due to the fact that he is a member of the boys can get out and see a real heavy hitter in action. He is admitted to the list of the players in the world, but did not get going at the provincial championships."

Nova Scotia's Great Celebration

(Burlington, Vt., Free Press.)

The celebration of a tercentenary bi-centennial and centennial all at one time, is a rare event in the history of the world. The celebration will occur this month in Nova Scotia. Since the event brings to light many of the most interesting and interesting which the United States and Canada share with each other, the celebration is attracting attention not only throughout the Maritime provinces and in Eastern Canada, but also among many members of the American Bar Association and others in the United States who follow with interest historical matters and all that tends to bring the United States and Canada into closer relation with each other.

The champion tercentenary, as was celebrated in Burlington and Flatbush in 1907, was decidedly an international event, with Great Britain, France and Canada participating. And the Nova Scotia tercentenary will have the participation of the United States and of England and of Scotland.

On the 8th of August, 1821, a royal charter was granted to Nova Scotia, now called Nova Scotia. This royal charter was set up as a separate sphere of influence in the new world in competition with New England and New France. This will be celebrated in Nova Scotia on August 31, 1921, the date being postponed to accommodate the Canadian Bar Association, which meets in Ottawa the first week in September, and to make it more convenient for members of the American bar who will be guests at that meeting after attending the celebration at Nova Scotia.

The place of the celebration is Annapolis Royal, N.S., because at this place 200 years ago the first British court of justice in what is now Canada was held. August 1721 was the anniversary of the neighboring Evangeline country made famous by Longfellow are considered the beauty spots of Eastern Canada.

An interesting fact about this was that the "Laws of Virginia" should be followed. A student of history will find that England, through her "laws" and traditions exercised a great influence on the Maritime provinces and eventually upon all of Canada. In founding this new province, which was peopled by subjects of England who had no grudge against their motherland, it was found that the best pattern of English law for colonial purposes was that which had been followed in Virginia.

Virginia could have been founded by Sir Walter Raleigh in order to strengthen Britain's hold upon another portion of the habitable globe and to thwart the colonization schemes of France and Spain. Its foundation principle was not to afford protection for any particular race, but to give religious freedom for all.

The purpose of the Virginia enterprise was described as "an action concerning God and the advancement of religion, the present ease, future honor and safety of the Kingdom of England who had no grudge against their motherland, it was found that the best pattern of English law for colonial purposes was that which had been followed in Virginia.

Bobbie and His Pa

(By William F. Kirk.)

The summer will soon be Vanishing, and Ma to Pa last night when we were sitting out on the front porch. Such thoughts ever make me pensive, but I have to face many things for Winter wear, and Ma. That is why I am pensive, Ma.

Pensive, as you might say, Pa. I hope it is not too grave a drag on you, Ma. I hope you will be able to weather the storm, and Ma.

I guess I will, and I always have weathered it & I guess I can keep it up. Bobbie, and Pa, give this old work horse, your noble sire, and Pa. Alint I a steady plucker than the rest?" and Pa.

I don't think you work like no horse, said Ma.

How perfectly awful & very false, said Ma.

Horace your master had, I said, & they don't ever give a chance to set on a peach like you & smash nice cigars.

I see that I have the family arid argument, said Pa. It is ever thus, Pa. And I found that Castle Eastman wasn't awful, after all.

Heading Hall and Crochet Castle, Heartbreak House and Rabbler-Grange.

All of these I'll must love and love in and I still must move and change.

Some of them were large and awesome, some of them were cabin or castle.

Grill Grange, or the humble Cabin occupied by Uncle Tom.

Some were full of light and laughter, some held the we of earth. From the very House of Usher to the merry House of Mirth!

I have suffered in A Doll's House, brightened in The House Next Door.

In The House With The Green Shutter life was something of a Sheltan.

Some I can remember plainly—some I can't with much doubt. (Like The House of a Thousand Candles—every one of 'em's gone out!)

By Old Robinson, in Cleveland Findealer.

SO TEMPERAMENTAL

"Was your leading lady injured when she bumped her head on the door?"

"No, but it threw her into a fit of jealousy."

"A fit of jealousy?"

"Yes, she saw so many other stars."

Macleod Fair 1921

Best On Record

Macleod Agricultural Fair for 1921 was the best ever. The attendance on the first day was upwards of 10,000, and the second day, on account of the threatened rain, a little smaller. The average attendance was good for the two days, and it may safely be said that those present enjoyed themselves to the limit.

The exhibits were well filled, and the sports and races were excellent, and the midway attractions afforded much pleasure to the crowds of pleasure seekers.

Much of the success of Macleod's fair this year is attributable to the indefatigable efforts of Secretary Gardner, backed by the directors, who, in the face of not overly favorable conditions retained a difficult situation, with the result that Macleod's fair for 1921 shows on the right side of the ledger and afforded two days of real recreation and amusement to all who attended.

The fair was a great success, and the race secretary, Geo. H. Scougal, in conjunction with the race committee, is to be congratulated on the smooth and efficient manner in which the races were run off.

VOTE FOR IRRIGATION

Now that the vote to raise the land within the advertised boundaries of the South Macleod Irrigation District into a fully organized irrigation district, and also to elect a Board of Trustees to carry on the work, is about to take place, we feel it our duty to urge all those who live within this district to interest themselves in this matter and do all in their power to take this vote as an endorsement of the work already done by the committee, who have labored so faithfully and so long to bring this district into its present position.

No one not in close touch with the matter can judge the difficulties overcome and the amount of work done, to say nothing of the personal expense incurred by those who have had this work in charge, and they are to be congratulated on their perseverance against discouragements.

When we consider the conditions that have prevailed for the past several years, it is almost impossible to think of there being any opposition to the completion of this scheme, but in case there may be some doubtful ones or those who do not fully understand, we urge those to attend the meetings in the several school houses as announced in another column, and endeavor to learn more on the subject. Without doubt, the committee will be on success wherever intelligently applied, and there is no reason why the districts here should not flourish upon the contrary to the disappointments of the past.

Nominations for the Board of Trustees are now in order and must be in the hands of the Returning Officer by Aug. 16th.

Information as to the manner and form of placing nominations appeared in the Times on August 4th. Look them up.

Further, we cannot refrain from urging that in the selection of the trustees, men of known business ability and integrity, as well as being vitally interested in the success of irrigation, be chosen and elected.

For the best men for the position, as the responsibility will devolve upon those elected to carry this scheme to a successful conclusion.

We feel confident of the result of the vote, but would it not be a great endorsement if there was not a single vote against the project? That is what should be. VOTE FOR IRRIGATION!

UNITY OF ENGLISH-SPEAKING PEOPLES

To the English-speaking nations the coming Washington conference will provide the opportunity to reveal to the world, and perhaps to themselves, their community of interests, their spiritual solidarity. The breach of the American revolution, never wholly repaired, though often forgotten for occasion, can be definitely removed, not, of course, in the sense of organic union, or even, perhaps, of political alliance, but by establishing the fundamental similarity of their viewpoints on world matters and their essential oneness in spirit. It is the instinct of the British peoples to think alike and together that makes the British Commonwealth, and not the so-called ties which are now growing obsolete; and to this fraternity the United States belongs by virtue of its inheritance, its traditions, its material interests and the spirit of its institutions.

The procedure at Washington is yet to be defined; but in effect there are to be two conferences, one limited to the Pacific powers. In this conference all the English-speaking peoples will take part; and it is in their attitude towards the Pacific problem, which are replacing those of Europe as the prime causes of world unrest, that these peoples will first realize in full measure their interdependence and their unity of interests.

It may be frankly said, for it is an undoubted fact, that the British nations directly fronting on the Pacific and thereby brought face to face with the question of Oriental immigration and allied matters have been tending more and more in recent years to adopt regarding the United States the surest guarantee of their ability to maintain their policies; they have not been so certain that they would have in this the support and sympathy of Great Britain, which, in terms of India, an Asiatic power, and which has found the immigration and other policies of the dominions a source of trouble. The possibility of a divorce of interests here which might mean a very great bearing on its future relationship of the British peoples has been fully realized in recent months under the termination of the Anglo-Japanese treaty on the ground that its maintenance might, at a critical juncture, drive a wedge between the English-speaking peoples.

The Spectator is not satisfied with existing conditions under which the treaty continues pending the conference, and it expresses its views on these plain terms:

"Owing to the way in which the matter has been dealt with by our government, we have lost the opportunity of making that impression on an American public opinion which the Spectator so strongly desires. It is now clear that we shall not be able to seize the opportunity of making an unmistakable and public sign of friendship to the people of the United States by interpreting action, and even amicable, their instinctive desire that we should not have diplomatic ties with Japan, and that if any power is to claim a position of racial equality with us it shall be those of our kind. We are to go into the conference arm in arm with Japan. Though we shall have lived in the effect of the League of Nations a clause intelligible, no doubt, to the British, but unintelligible to the ordinary man, pointing out that this arm-in-arm is not to be taken to mean anything, the effect on the public mind of America will still be one of ambiguity."

"President Harding and the State Department will realize that in effect we are once more free, and will therefore be fully satisfied as to the amity of our intentions; but can anyone say that it is all that is wanted? It will not be the business of the State Department to make matters clear to the people of the United States; nor, indeed, would it be of any use for it to attempt the task if it were its business. There is such an attempt would only puzzle American public opinion the more and make people say in effect: 'What's the game now?' If the British were really 'straight,' they would tell us this themselves and not leave it to others."

"In other words, under the arrangements sketched by Mr. Lloyd George, we shall still have ourselves open to the attacks of Japan to the detriment of the American population who wish us ill on the ground that we seem to prefer the friendship of Japan to the friendship of the United States. If America was nearer, and if Americans were sufficiently interested in foreign affairs or studied them in enough detail we could perhaps explain away our retention of the alliance, but unfortunately, explaining away—always a difficult task—is an impossibility when the details of the subject are quite unfamiliar to the person to whom the explanation is offered. The American, we fear, misunderstand our explanations, for they would have forgotten the facts upon which our long and involved explanations were based. They will find easy access to men's minds must be something queer about the British, or they would never have 'eaten the way they eat.' The main reason we fear it is useless, we repeat once more, to urge the American people to renounce the treaty. We have a perfectly good ground for doing so. Let us say to Japan, 'We want to enter the Pacific conference absolutely unfettered. We want to be free, morally as well as legally, to take any line we like.' If we take this line, neither Japan nor any other power will have the slightest right to say 'R. T. Barker's.'"

These views are all but identical with the opinion, freely expressed in Great Britain, that the treaty would terminate in a year's time. This not having been done, can it be said that the Pacific policy with the British Pacific dominions and with the United States. This need not involve a direct line of English-speaking nations against Japan; there ought to be full recognition of Japan's difficulties and sympathetic consideration of them, the negotiations being so handled as not to offend the sensibilities of the United States. The importance of developing and establishing a policy common to the English-speaking peoples, and equally acceptable to them, must never be overlooked; no other position of Great Britain, and even less for an agreement of this kind, having in mind its international importance and the bearing it will have upon the world's future, will mark and certify the essential similarity of the English-speaking peoples. The opportunity is so great that the possibility of it not being taken full advantage of, or even destroyed by inept handling, must be an occasion for concern. This brings us to the matter of suitable representatives—a large question which will stand a good deal of consideration.
